Here is an idea for the 3 year old. Around Halloween, I believe McDonalds still gives out their happy meals in those little Halloween buckets. What I did was take a big box and cut holes in it for the arms and head. I cut the bottom out. Then I painted it silver and adorned it all to look like a robot. Then I took the McDonalds bucket, covered it with tin foil and used black marker to make a design on it. Instant robot! I did this because it was always so cold at Halloween and I didn't want my son out in those skimpy costumes. So he was able to wear some really warm black sweats under the box.
